Arizona Stories: An Eight Original Production Arizona Centennial 2012 Legacy Project Application

1. General Description

Arizona Stories is a multi-year, multimedia project that includes television programs, DVDs, a robust companion Web site (www.azpbs.org/arizonastories) and a strong educational element. Our goals are threefold: to create engaging local content that entertains and educates a general audience about Arizona's rich heritage, to provide Arizona educators with quality content and educator guides and training aligned to state standards, and to create the best, most diverse and most accessible history content as we countdown to the Arizona Centennial.

Each 30-minute television program includes three mini-documentaries (5-8 minutes long each) and interstitial features on Arizona Milestones and "Then & Now" photographs. In our first two seasons, we also included "Did You Know" factoids. By 2012, we will have 48 episodes and several specials, which equals at least 28 hours of original, local content. We already are half way to that goal. In 2012, we will air a different show each week for an entire year in celebration of Arizona's Centennial. The companion Web site includes transcripts and photographs for each mini-documentary, all of the "Then & Now" and "Did You Know" and Milestones content. We currently are streaming twelve of the mini-documentaries. All 24 Milestones features will be available via streaming by October 14, 2008. We plan to continue adding more content to the Web site as resources allow. Web visitation has been incredibly strong. A link to the Arizona Stories Web site was recently added to another organizations' educational Web site and another national entity promoted visitation to the site. The result was more than 150,000 visits over a three month period with an average "Time Viewed" of over 5 minutes.

Arizona Stories is a project that Eight is well-qualified to produce. We specialize in the education of children, in-depth news and public affairs, lifelong learning, and the celebration of arts and culture — utilizing the power of noncommercial television, the Internet, educational outreach services, and community-based initiatives. Our PBS station began broadcasting from the campus of Arizona State University on January 30, 1961. Now more than 80 percent of Arizonans receive the signal through a network of translators, cable and satellite systems. With more than 1.3 million viewers each week, Eight consistently ranks among the most-viewed public television stations per capita in the country. Arizonans provide more than 60 percent of the station's annual budget.

2. Legacy Project Criteria

Arizona Stories meets all Arizona Centennial Legacy Project criteria.

- Every element of Arizona Stories content accurately portrays Arizona history. We painstakingly research each subject. We actively seek the counsel and participation of history scholars across the state.
- Arizona Stories is broadcast on Eight, which reaches approximately 80% of Arizona households via free television – cable or satellite is not required. Arizona Public Media (KUAT) in Tucson, Arizona also broadcasts the series, thereby making Arizona Stories available across the entire state. The companion Web site is available 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, 365 days a year. DVDs allow for use in classrooms and for home viewing wherever, and whenever, people want to watch. As delivery mechanisms change, we will pursue additional distribution mechanisms, i.e. video on demand.
- Arizona Stories would not be possible without the collaboration of content partners across the state and beyond. Many of our story ideas come from the historical community and other heritage partners. Our project is a visual one requiring the use of countless historic photographs, moving images, ephemera and other historic objects and locations. We have partnered with many entities including this small sampling: Arizona Historical Society (all locations), Arizona Historical Foundation, Arizona State Library, Archives and Public Records, Arizona State Parks, Arizona State University Library Special Collections, University of Arizona Library Special Collections, Northern Arizona University Library Special Collections, Sharlot Hall Museum, Tempe Historical Society, Bisbee Mining and Mineral Museum and Arcadia Publishing.

- Arizona Stories is evergreen, original content that will be broadcast, streamed online and used by educators for years to come, well beyond 2012.
- Eight's educational outreach department, ASSET, conducts professional development and outreach efforts to help educators across Arizona utilize the full portfolio of educational resources available through Eight and PBS. The resources and professional development are available to schools and districts at no charge and supports educators in their work with PreK-12 students to reach academic goals. Arizona Stories is one of the local productions used as a focus for educator workshops by ASSET staff. ASSET is in the process of aligning all Arizona Stories 88 mini-documentary features to Arizona Academic Standards and creating an Arizona Stories Teaching Guide for use of these broadcast and online resources in the classroom. Also, ASSET plans to create flash animated interactive activities related to some of the Arizona Stories content. These online resources, developed specifically around Arizona Academic Standards, will be designed for classroom use by educators and students.
- Our plan for implementation is in three parts, which is illustrated in the timeline in the next section of this application.
 - What we've already done
 - What we are currently doing
 - What we will do in the future
